Why UW-Green Bay students chose Schenck:

We get formal training in classrooms at Schenck, but we are also assigned senior level mentors. These mentors are great—we can ask about anything from recording timesheets to questions on an engagement. I really enjoy working with small business clients, and that's what I get to do here at Schenck. Schenck also encourages us to be involved in our communities.

As a graduate with no public accounting experience, I started my first busy season as many college graduates do—with little idea what to expect, but eager to learn. The training and continuing education programs I've participated in have been of great use, but the mentoring is really what completes the training. Whether you ask questions of your assigned mentor or just someone experienced in a certain area, everyone is willing to help out and wants to see you advance.

Schenck provides me the opportunity to quickly advance in the areas of public accounting that I am passionate about. My supervisors care about the path I want to take and provide me with all of the tools to move along that path at my speed. The mentoring ladder at Schenck enables me to have access to professionals that I can go to for help without hesitation.

It's not always easy being the "new kid on the block," but at Schenck, I felt very welcomed during my internship experience. Staff at every level were very receptive to the many questions I had. The transition from my internship to career went very smoothly. By gaining experience during my internship here at Schenck, many of the questions and uncertainties I had were resolved before I started on full-time.

Schenck encourages employees to be loyal to their customers, community, and family. The firm provides a network of experience and support by encouraging community involvement and enhancing customer connections, while allowing employees to maintain a good work/family balance.
