

FORT HOWARD COMPANY RECORDS, 1919 – 2009

Abstract

Records, product samples, photographs, video recordings, and artifacts of a Green Bay, Wisconsin paper manufacturer. Fort Howard was one of the nation's largest producers of disposable paper products such as: toilet paper, paper toweling, napkins, placemats, and wipers.

Documented are Fort Howard's innovations in the use of recycled paper and other environmental issues, inventions and patents of paper making and paper folding machines, expansions, acquisitions, mergers, employee activities, and company philanthropy. Biographical information on the Cofrin family and other company leaders is also present.

Presented by the Georgia Pacific Corporation (South Broadway Plant, Green Bay), 2001

Processed under the direction of Deb Anderson, Archivist, by Renee Ettinger, Jeanne Neidenbach Jean Wentz and Jeanine Mead (2001-2010).

History

The Fort Howard Company was founded in 1919 by Austin E. Cofrin, with backing by a handful of investors. Built on the west side of the Fox River in Green Bay, Wisconsin, the company takes its name from an 1800s military outpost located near the mouth of the Fox River. The company was dedicated to the mass manufacture of sanitary paper products (namely bath tissue, colored crepe, facial tissue, and paper toweling in the early days). Their marketing strategy of "elegant yet affordable" made Fort Howard's products widely available to the majority of the population, including private, business, and commercial sectors.

From the start, Fort Howard operated nearly self-sufficiently. It supplied many of its own needs that would normally have been purchased or contracted through outside sources. They created their own power, they made some of their own chemicals, they maintained their own landfills, and they built and serviced their own machines. They had an in-house graphic design department that designed all artwork for their products and packaging.

In the 1930s, even before the shortages and rationing of World War II or mass public recycling, Fort Howard began experimenting with utilizing recycled wastepaper for its products. It organized collections of old phone books, newspapers, and office wastepaper from publishers, businesses and government agencies. Within the next few decades, the company processed hundreds of thousands of tons of wastepaper. Due to its self-sufficiency and its greatly reduced cost for raw materials, Fort Howard began to dominate the world market for tissue products.

The aggressive success of Fort Howard is due in large part to founder Austin E. Cofrin, who put on no airs and had the hard-work ethic of someone who had been working and supporting his family since the age of 13. He walked to the mill each day, even in bad weather, and he always knew what was going on with his workers and his machines. Not until 1960, when his health forced him to retire, did he surrender control. His son, John Paige Cofrin, was named president. Not until John's death in 1974 did the company fall outside of Cofrin family control, when Paul Schierl was named president and CEO.

Fort Howard quickly became one of the largest employers in the Green Bay area. In 1971, common stock was offered for sale for the first time, making the company publicly-owned. This move precipitated the start of many expansions and acquisitions that would span the globe and the next three decades.

In 1976, Fort Howard began construction of a second paper making and paper converting plant in Muskogee, Oklahoma and, in 1986, a third in Rincon, Georgia. In 1980, it acquired the Sterling Group in Manchester, England, another operation that utilized recycled paper for its products. The U.K. acquisition made it possible for Fort Howard to expand its market abroad. Also in 1980, Fort Howard acquired The Harmon Group, a wastepaper firm in New York. The Harmon Group supplied Fort Howard with much of its raw material for tissue production.

Armed with ample suppliers of wastepaper, ample production facilities, and a wide share of the world's tissue market, Fort Howard expanded its product line for the first time beyond tissue production. In 1983, it purchased Maryland Cup Corporation, which was then the country's largest manufacturer of disposable (or edible) food use products, which included paper and plastic cups, drinking straws, plastic eating utensils, and ice cream cones. This acquisition further increased foreign markets, as Maryland Cup maintained manufacturing operations in the U.K., the Netherlands, Canada, and Japan. Another cup manufacturer, Lily Tulip, was acquired in 1986.

In 1987, stock shareholders voted to change the name of the Fort Howard Company to the Fort Howard Corporation, unifying all aspects of operations at all locations under one umbrella. The Green Bay location was designated as the corporation's world headquarters.

The cup acquisitions, however, proved not to be as cost-effective or profitable as the paper-making business, largely due to the inability to use waste materials for production. A differing work ethic at those plants compared to Green Bay's mill was also a factor, according to CEO Paul Schierl in Fort Howard: A Retrospect [published ca. 1985]. In 1988, Fort Howard and investment banker Morgan Stanley bought all public shares of stock, once again making the company privately-owned. The company decided to focus their resources on the tissue production side of the business. In 1989, it acquired Ecosource, an office wastepaper recovery facility in Green Bay, similar to their Harmon facility in New York. The cup operations were then sold in 1989.

In 1994, Fort Howard opened a sales office in Monterrey, Mexico, from which they imported products from the Muskogee mill for the Mexican market. The company went from private to public again in 1995, when it offered 25 million shares of stock for public sale. In 1996, Fort Howard and CIMIC Holdings Ltd. (an international holding company) embarked on a joint venture in China, opening a tissue manufacturing mill in Shanghai.

Perhaps the biggest change Fort Howard underwent was in 1997, when it merged with another Green Bay paper mill, James River. James River was originally known as Northern Paper Mills, where Austin E. Cofrin was working as a general superintendant in 1918 before founding Fort Howard Company. After 78 years of manufacturing under the Fort Howard name and label, the newly-merged company called itself Fort James. Three years later, in 2000, Fort James was bought by another paper manufacturer, Atlanta-based Georgia Pacific. Both Fort James and Georgia Pacific remained publicly-owned until Koch Industries, Inc. purchased all shares in 2005, making the company a privately-held subsidiary. It continues to operate under the Georgia Pacific name and management today (2010).

Throughout these expansions, acquisitions, and mergers, Fort Howard's leadership underwent changes as well. In 1984, Paul Schierl (president and CEO for the past decade) became Board Chairman and Don DeMeuse became president. In 1992, Fort Howard reorganized its management. Don DeMeuse became Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Kathleen Hempel became Vice Chairman and Chief Financial Officer, and Michael Riordan became President and Chief Operating Officer. When Don DeMeuse retired in 1996, Michael Riordan succeeded him as President and Chief Executive Officer. When Fort Howard and James River merged in 1997, James River CEO Miles Marsh became chairman and CEO, and Michael Riordan became president and chief operating officer of the newly-formed Fort James. Pete Correll was Chairman and CEO of Georgia Pacific at the time of the Fort James buyout in 2000.

Fort Howard had always considered itself a leader in reducing its impact on the environment, even before environmental regulations introduced in the 1970s and the passing of the U.S. Clean Water Act. They re-captured and re-used their wastewater and any tissue fibers in it. They received FDA approval for substituting a safe alternative to ozone-depleting CFCs in their manufacturing process. They carefully monitored their emission control systems, and not only met governmental standards but often exceeded them. They had on-site landfills. Their wastewater sludge was utilized by Grantech, a Green Bay company that provided safe shipping containment for fertilizer and herbicide manufacturers.

In 1990, Fort Howard won the Environmental Protection Agency Administrator's Award for Recycling Leadership. In 1991, it received the National Recycling Coalition Award for Recycling Innovation, and the American Paper Institute's Environmental and Energy Achievement Award. The company had a big voice in many municipalities' now-standard mandatory recycling programs.

The management and leaders of Fort Howard were largely responsible for the company's favorable climate and its reputation as being a great place to work. Although they were demanding of very high standards in their workers, they also knew how to have fun. Tennis courts were a part of the mill property in the early years. They held three and six-mile runs. They sponsored employee bus trips to Milwaukee Brewer games. Throughout their history, they have had company teams or leagues for basketball, football, softball, archery, trapshooting, bowling, golf, and volleyball. They sponsored company picnics for workers and their families. Since 1989 they have sponsored United Way campaigns at the company.

In the regions in which it operates, Fort Howard (and the Cofrin Family) was recognized as a leader in philanthropy. The Fort Howard Foundation has donated millions of dollars in scholarships, grants, and gifts to nonprofit and health organizations in the Green Bay, Savannah, and Muskogee areas. Some of the many Green Bay area recipients include the Curative Rehabilitation Center, NEW Community Clinic, Family Service Association, Children's Hospital of Wisconsin, the University of Notre Dame, the YMCA, the Weidner Center for the Performing Arts, the University of Wisconsin-

Green Bay, the Hmong Community Center, Syble Hopp School, Paul's Pantry, the Green Bay Symphony Orchestra, the National Law Enforcement Memorial Fund, and many more.

COFRIN FAMILY contains biographical materials on company founder, Austin E. Cofrin, his son John Paige Cofrin (who assumed leadership of the company in 1960), as well as other Cofrin family members.

HISTORICAL MATERIALS document the founding of the company in 1919 and important milestones, such as their 50th and 75th anniversaries.

ADMINISTRATIVE RECORDS

Because these records are so vast, they are broken down into the sub-categories of:

1. Agreements and contracts for purchasing machinery, use and maintenance of railroad track, contractor negotiations and fees, consignments, price agreements, employment contracts, broker arrangements, and any other agreements requiring legal or written documentation between Fort Howard and other businesses, railroads, or public utilities.

2. Buildings and machines includes timelines for construction and expansion of certain mill buildings, as well as specifications provided to the company for the construction of mill machines and equipment.
3. Correspondence mainly from 1924-1965 documenting daily business operations such as shipments of goods, company expansion, price negotiations, credit lines extended to the company, submission of brand names to the Federal Trade Commission, etc.
4. Executives contains biographical sketches, limited correspondence, and speeches by company executives (mainly Paul Schierl and Don DeMeuse, but files are present for Kathleen Hempel and Michael Riordan as well)
5. Governing documents include articles of incorporation, bylaws and their amendments.
6. Leases for various buildings in locations such as New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia and Green Bay.
7. Licenses to conduct business in other states, to use explosives, and for public storage warehouses.
8. Legal documents, mainly 1926-1956, include memorandums of judgment, objections to tax assessment, cancelled checks used as evidence, cremation certificate authorizing the destruction of certain company records, attorney appointment, and Defence Production Necessity Certificates.
9. Patents on machines and devices used exclusively by the Fort Howard Company (mostly by Glenn Shaffer and Emil Hansen)
10. Reports published both internally and externally. Content varies greatly from annual reports to a disaster recovery plan. Years are sporadic.
11. Stock mainly deals with early subscriptions for stock, stock escrow agreements, and stock performance, but includes the offer of the company to purchase public stock in order to privatize the company in 1988.
12. Subsidiaries/mergers/acquisitions includes press releases and news clippings, talking points of executives, management and branding direction, letters to suppliers and stockholders. Primarily documents the Fort Howard/James River merger in 1997.

EMPLOYEEES and company happenings are well-documented in the employee newsletters. This collection includes Our Own (1926 – 1948), Fort Howard Focus (1978-1997, focusing on all locations of operation), Fort Share (1990-1993), and subsequent publications focusing on the original Green Bay mill: Inside the Fort (1987-2000), Inside Green Bay West (2000 – 2001), and West Side Story (2001-2004). In 2004, Georgia Pacific combined their former separate employee newsletters from its Day Street and Broadway mills into a single newsletter entitled Pressing Issues. Holdings of Pressing Issues span from 2004 – 2007. Sales and marketing also had its own newsletter, Fort Howard Paper Man (1968-1978), The Bugle (1979 – 1981), and The Pick and Shovel (1974-1975). No newsletters from the 1949-1977 time period were acquired.

The earliest newsletters from the 1920s and 1930s read more like a small-town newspaper, including wedding and birth announcements, obituaries, poems, jokes, medical and safety advice, classified ads, and cartoons. A Servicemen’s Edition was published in 1945, and lists of Fort Howard employees serving in the armed forces (and their addresses) are included here. Video newsletters were produced quarterly in the late 1980s and 1990s called The Fort Howard Report, which encompassed all mills and reported news on products, machinery, financial standing, and any new initiatives.

A good representation of Fort Howard's many products is housed within the PRODUCT SAMPLES, PRODUCT PACKAGING, PRODUCT LITERATURE, AND ARTIFACTS portions of the collection. They clearly reflect the era in which they were produced.

Napkin samples reflect colors and patterns that were popular during certain time periods, as well as pop culture. Napkins feature cartoon, comic book, and movie characters (Batman, Smurfs, Casper the Friendly Ghost, Wonder Woman, Transformers, Rambo, etc.) as well as popular toys of the day (Cabbage Patch Kids, etc.)

Napkins also feature popular slogans (i.e. "Buckle Up – it's our law," "Hamm's – the beer you've been looking for," "Warner Bros. – 75 years entertaining the world."). The country's many restaurants, lounges, and bars that had their names, locations, and/or mottos printed on their napkins are also well-represented.

Included are samples of early toilet paper on the roll (many are undated, but appear to be from the 1930s-1940s), some in their original packaging. Some rolls appear to document the capability and performance of the particular machines on which they were produced; others showcase the original artwork from the labels in which they were packaged. Popular art styles (i.e. art deco) during certain time periods can be determined from these labels.

A large collection of napkins and placemats sport a variety of advertisements, sayings and designs. These are not only representative of Fort Howard's market reach (restaurants, manufacturers, breweries, airlines, etc.), but also provide a glimpse into happenings within the company. Napkins commemorate vice president Dan Quayle's visit to Fort Howard in 1989, and document employee activities and initiatives on quality, safety, recycling, etc. Napkins frequently feature the current company logo.

Product samples also include paper toweling (no dates), wipers (1997-2009), and a scattering of disposable plates and cups.

Packaging and labels for these products cover a more comprehensive time span than the product samples themselves. They tout what was important to consumers during certain time periods, such as whiteness, softness, recycled content, convenience, etc. All artwork was done in-house by Fort Howard artists; progression from hand drawing to computerized graphic production is documented.

Ad reprints from 1957-1963 and 1982-1996, as well as sales support materials such as product specification sheets depict the evolution of Fort Howard's products and target markets.

COMMUNICATIONS DEPARTMENT records contain press releases (1967-1997) and news clippings (1954-2005), as well as corporate standards and logos throughout the company's history.

FINANCIAL RECORDS are present from the inception of the company in 1919 through when it was Fort James, ending in 2000. They include statements and balance sheets (mainly 1920-1974), product invoices, miscellaneous tax records (1930s – 1950s), and budgets for the building of the plant in Muskogee, Oklahoma (1980s). The records also contain a large number of accounting volumes, mainly general ledgers (1920s – 1980s), daybooks (1919 – 1970s), and asset account and depreciation logs by department (1928 – 1973). The effect of World War II on the mill and production is documented in the asset account and depreciation logs by department (war department and emergency department).

PUBLICATIONS of the company mainly date from the 1980s and 1990s and include pieces documenting company history (The Story of Paper and Fort Howard Paper Company, 1984; Fort Howard: A Retrospect, 1995; The Maverick Spirit: Georgia Pacific at 75, 2001). Other publications include annual reports from 1971-1987 and 1995-1996.

The AUDIO AND VISUAL materials, 1920-2009, include photographs, negatives, slides, compact discs, videotapes, audiocassettes, and film.

Photographs, negatives, and slides document the company's history of exterior and interior physical plant construction. Machinery installation and operation are well-represented through all eras as well. In addition, the collection contains candid & formal photographs of company executives and mill employees. Employee photographs include special events such as banquets, conferences, trips, picnics, awards and pictures used in the company newsletters. Aerial photos were taken regularly of the entire Fort Howard property and date from the 1930s through the 1990s. These aerial photographs offer not only a history of the physical plant changes over the years but also document the changing landscape of the east and west side of Green Bay. Other areas covered in the photographs, negatives, and slides include company products and four decades of visits by Fort Howard customers to the South Broadway mill. Miscellaneous photos include shots at the company dock slip, dumping and sludge grounds, fires and snowstorms, celebrity visits, etc. In addition to Green Bay location photos, there are mill/employee photos of the corporation's out of state mills. Collection contains framed portraits of Austin E. Cofrin and John P. Cofrin as well as framed prints of company products, historic company photos, etc. There are also collages of photos mounted on foam core that were used for exhibits and various award plaques.

Compact Discs in the collection were burned on either a Mac (1997-2002) or a PC (2000-2009) and are noted as such in the finding aid. The discs contain digital photos of employees, events, products, and company buildings. The photos were used for company publications or special projects such as a power point presentation.

Videotapes date from the late 1980s through early 2000s and are either formatted for VHS or Beta (the finding aid denotes format for these videotapes). Contents of the videotape collection include The Fort Howard Report (a quarterly company newsletter), banquets, meetings, award presentations, and press conferences. Of special interest are tapes documenting the merger of Fort Howard and James River in 1997 and Fort James and Georgia Pacific in 2001. Video presentations to employees regarding change from public stock to private stock status in 1988 are also documented. Products are showcased in advertising spots as well as in presentations for salespeople. Employee training videos cover a wide range of company departments. In addition, there is video of mill tours and machinery operation videos that document the fundamentals of plant operations.

Audiocassettes are limited in number and date from the late 1980s to late 1990s. Subject matter includes conferences and product information. Two 8mm videocassettes are also in the collection and deal with product and the Muskogee OK mill.

Film in this collection is both 16 and 35 mm and the subject matter is limited to company products.

ARTIFACTS included in the collection are plaques awarded to the company (ca. 1980s-2009), items awarded to employees for years of service or sales achievements (silver bowl, Key Club key, lapel pin), an athletic club scrapbook from 1929-1930, several product dispensers and holders (undated), a ca. 1960s-1970s hard hat, and various merchandise with the company logo from ca. 1980s – 2007.
