About our training programs

The Center for Public Affairs’ goal is to provide continuing education opportunities for local organizations that serve the public.

With expertise in program evaluation, leadership and nonprofit management, the Center hosts training opportunities for public and nonprofit organizations to learn valuable vocational skills and strategies.

Spring 2015 trainings offered by the Center for Public Affairs will include (dates tentative):

- Outcome Measurement (February)
- Fundraising (March)
- Board of Directors (April)

In addition, the Center offers customized trainings. Faculty will work with local government or nonprofit organizations to identify training needs and develop curriculum that achieves unique goals.

Trainings are offered in conjunction with UW Green Bay Outreach and Adult Access.

Let us Introduce Ourselves!

Lora Warner, Director
Lora teaches courses on program evaluation, public administration, fundraising, and philanthropy as an Associate Professor in the Public and Environmental Affairs Department. Lora, with partners, staff, and students, led the 2011 Fox River Region LIFE Study.

Ashley Heath, Associate Director
Ashley is a UW Green Bay graduate and has worked on a number of community research initiatives and trainings as well as campus programming for students. Ashley’s academic experience and interests include volunteerism, service learning and student engagement.

Every project needs money to blossom, yet traditional sources of funding for many programs have been shrinking. If you’ve been appointed the official (or especially, the unofficial) grant writer for your organization, this workshop is for you!

Join Joe Gaunt, veteran grant writer and Lora Warner, Ph.D., Associate Professor, for an informative and enjoyable workshop that will put you in the know about how to win the grant your organization needs!

This workshop will help you:

- Navigate professional grant-seeking resources
- Discover how to ‘find the funders’ to support your organization
- Develop a strong LOI—Letter of Inquiry

Bring your current ideas and projects with you. You will leave with a well developed plan to write a successful proposal!
