In addition to numerous articles on government military topics, the Military and Government Collection contains over 50,000 primary source documents from the American Reference Library. Documents included range from George Washington’s First Inaugural Address to Richard Nixon’s resignation speech. Documents of a less public nature such as a letter from President Lyndon Johnson to Ho Chi Minh are included. The collection contains the full text for nearly 300 academic journals and popular periodicals, as well as books, conference papers, and government documents.

Need to give your Students a URL for Library Resources?

Accessing library databases and other resources from off-campus isn’t quite as simple as copying the url out of the address bar and pasting it into an e-mail. These are temporary addresses created on the fly and won’t work if you try and go back to the page when off-campus. Films on Demand clips and Proquest’s Off-campus access is through the university’s proxy server, which authenticates users by directing them to a page where they log-in with their campus user name and password. Even if you put the link inside a D2L course where students have already logged in and been authenticated, D2L does not pass that authentication along to the database they may be trying to access.

Articles within databases also usually have temporary URLs as well, so the same holds true for linking to articles within a database. Some databases such as those from EBSCOhost instead include a permalink, which usually works; permalinks created in LexisNexis Academic do not. In Proquest databases, the document URL towards the bottom (if there is one) tends to work.

Try putting this link at the beginning of your url: https://ezproxy.uwgb.edu:2443/login?url= to try and direct users to the proxy server. See our Integrating Library Resources Into D2L guide at http://libguides.uwgb.edu/d2l for step by step instructions on creating a link for off-campus access, or contact the library Research Assistance Desk at 2303 for help.

Cabell’s Directories

Looking for the best journal for submitting an article for publication? One place to start is Cabell’s Directories of Publishing Opportunities.
Currently the library subscribes to directories in accounting, economics & finance, management, marketing, and computer science/business information. Access Cabell’s from the Databases A-Z link on the library homepage.

Staff Profile: Mitchell Scott
In each newsletter, we will profile library staff members. This month, it’s Mitchell Scott.

Mitchell works behind the scenes to borrow needed books and journal articles from other libraries and get them to you as quickly as possible.
