Financial Management for Non-Financial Managers

Learn to analyze business opportunities, assess financial risks, and communicate your ideas to others.

Tuesday, July 19, 2016
8:30 a.m. – 3:30 p.m.
Advance Business & Manufacturing Center
Green Bay, WI

In this workshop you will learn basic financial management skills every business person should know. Topics will cover the three major financial statements, sources and uses of cash, cash budgeting, breakeven analysis and an introduction to financial ratios. Emphasis is placed on the practical uses of financial information as a diagnostic tool to understand a company's health. Using real life examples and exercises, participants will learn simple and necessary skills they can immediately apply to their workplace.

You will learn:

• The difference between profits and cash
• How to interpret and understand the income statement, cash flow, and balance sheet
• Techniques for managing cash flow
• How to calculate a breakeven point
• Methods to evaluate capital purchases
• How to use financial information to manage and forecast your business
• The importance of understanding your cash conversion cycle
• How to predict your cash needs with a cash budget and assumptions
• Where cash lies hidden in your business and how to get it back

Instructor – Greg Gauthier

Greg Gauthier has over 25 years of senior management experience in large, publicly traded and small, privately held companies. He was a small business owner for nearly ten years and has particular strengths in operations management and information systems, cash flow and profitability, and business turnaround.

Who should attend?

Financial Management for Non-Financial Managers is well suited to anyone who is new to financial concepts and techniques and to any manager or executive who wishes to update his or her knowledge of basic finance and accounting. It is particularly applicable to individuals whose backgrounds are in creative, scientific, or technical fields.
