

UNIVERSITY of WISCONSIN
GREEN BAY

College of Science and Technology

Dear Donor,

The College of Science and Technology was established at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay on July 1, 2016, during the transition to a new four-college model advanced by Chancellor Gary Miller. The College of Science and Technology includes undergraduate programs in biology, chemistry, engineering technology, environment science, geoscience, human biology, mathematics and physics; graduate programs in environmental science and policy and the collaborative on-line program in sustainable management; and also includes the Cofrin Center for Biodiversity and the Environmental Management and Business Institute. At its core, the College of Science and Technology is focused on:

- People – we strive to provide the best educational experience for our students, with our high quality faculty and facilities providing relevant laboratory and research opportunities.
- Programs – the majors offered in CST are in high demand fields, with human biology being one of the largest majors on campus and rapid growth being experience in engineering technology (electrical, mechanical and environmental).
- Partnerships – faculty and students in CST benefit from ongoing collaborations with business, industry, government, non-profits and other regional educational institutions such as the Medical College of Wisconsin.

As the founding Dean of the College of Science and Technology and a fellow UWGB alumni (91’ and 93”), I would encourage you to consider making a financial contribution that will allow us to expand the educational opportunities available to our students now and in the future. Thanks for considering this important request and feel free to contact me at 920-465-2278 or katersj@uwgb.edu if you have questions or just wanted to reconnect with the university in any way.

Sincerely,

Dr. John F. Katers (91’ and 93’)
Dean, College of Science and Technology
