

Political Science | 2013-2014 Assessment Plan

1. Which outcome will you assess?

We assess the following outcomes (depending on the content of assessed courses)

For American politics content courses:

Learning Outcome	Learning outcome is not met (Level One)	Learning outcome is met (Level Two)	Learning outcome is exceeded (Level Three)
Students will demonstrate knowledge of and ability to analyze U.S. government institutions, political processes, and behavior.
Students will exhibit an ability to evaluate political institutions and processes from the perspective of democratic principles, including majority politics, the protection of minority rights, and the value of due process.
Students will show an ability to think critically and a capacity to use political science research. This includes an understanding of social science research methods and elementary statistical concepts, and the ability to use professional resources such as journals, indexes, and government documents.
Students will be able to qualify for graduate study in political science, public policy, public administration, law, international affairs, or related fields or to qualify for entry level employment requiring competence in governmental and political processes, or for teaching government.
Students will demonstrate ability to write clearly and effectively.

For international politics content courses:

Learning Outcome	Learning outcome is not met (Level One)	Learning outcome is met (Level Two)	Learning outcome is exceeded (Level Three)
Students will exhibit knowledge of and ability to analyze government institutions, political processes, and behavior in select Western and non-Western countries.
Students will show an ability to evaluate variables essential for transition to and consolidation of democracy, including historical, institutional, political cultural, and behavioral factors, as well as structural obstacles to democratization.
Students will demonstrate an ability to think critically and a capacity to use political science research. This includes an understanding of social science research methods and elementary statistical concepts, and the ability to use professional resources such as journals, indexes, and government documents.
Students will be able to qualify for entry level employment requiring competence in governmental and political processes.

For political theory content courses:

Learning Outcome	Learning outcome is not met (Level One)	Learning outcome is met (Level Two)	Learning outcome is exceeded (Level Three)
Students will exhibit knowledge of and ability to analyze and critique the history of political theory, including ancient, modern and contemporary thinkers
Students will demonstrate an ability to approach political questions from a theoretical and historical perspective, including discussing questions of method, form and context
Students will show an ability to think critically and a capacity to use political theory research. This includes an understanding of the core questions and approaches, as well as key figures in political theory as a part of political science
Students will be able to qualify for entry level employment requiring competence in governmental and political processes.

2. Which technique will you use to assess this outcome?

We perform embedded assessments of all written work students produce in our required UL courses for the major (research papers, debate papers, reaction papers, policy memoranda, legal briefs, etc.)

3. Which course or group of students will you assess on the outcome chosen above and when?

Every semester we collect data (see above) on all political science students (majors only) taking required UL political science classes.

In the Fall our assessed classes include:

Constitutional Law

Political Theory

Political Behavior

International Relations and

Comparative Politics

In the Spring, our assessed classes are:

American Political Thought

Constitutional Law

Congress

Comparative Politics

Foreign and Defense Policies

These classes, collectively, represent all required Political Science classes, so we are assessing most our students any given academic year.