You believe changing people's lives matters.

And you want to do even more to help. The social work profession beckons people like you to continue your ongoing quest to build better, healthier families and communities.

Graduates and seasoned social work practitioners alike find the Master of Social Work (MSW) degree at UW-Green Bay to be a smart choice, providing the program flexibility, faculty excellence and field experience needed to move society forward.

A Master of Social Work degree:

- Provides more options and opportunities for those building a long-term career in the human services.
- Prepares students for advanced level professional practice applicable to a wide range of positions in the human services.
- Puts a special emphasis on multicultural practice, social justice, leadership and advocacy.

Accredited by the Council on Social Work Education (CSWE), UW-Green Bay's Master of Social Work program seeks applicants who have a demonstrated interest in human services, sensitivity to multicultural practice and a deep commitment to social work.

Flexibility and Options For Your Success

Designed for working adults,
UW-Green Bay's Master of Social Work program courses are:

- Offered in the daytime or evening
- A combination of in-person, hybrid and online to provide the greatest flexibility for your busy life.

Part-time and full-time programs are available:

- Part-time option: four years to completion for generalist; two years for specialized
- Full-time option: two years for generalist; one year for specialized

Note: Full curriculum is 59 credits; advanced standing is 32.

More advantages:

- A cohort model puts an emphasis on building and maintaining student-to-student and faculty-to-student relationships.
- Advanced standing for students with a BSW from an accredited social work program.
- Final projects completed in the specialized year consist of a research poster and public symposium demonstrating mastery of the Council on Social Work Education (CSWE) competencies for Social Work practice.
