The English Program is a large program with a well-developed sense of direction and identity and informed perspectives on balancing the needs of the program, faculty and students with available resources. The program understands its strengths and provides a good range of courses for its majors/minors. This includes offerings in World Literature where the faculty is seeing a growing interest. Some concern was expressed regarding the number of preparations faculty are doing to provide this diversity of courses but the self-study also indicated that it was the preference of faculty to teach a diverse array of courses in order to meet student needs.
